

Modern Landfill as Critical Infrastructure

December 3, 2020

Shelter-in-place orders have made us all more aware of our waste, recycling needs

YORK, Pa. (Dec. 3, 2020) – Now more than ever, with Pennsylvanians sheltering in place, teaching from home, and severely curtailing non-essential social interactions amid the lingering effects of COVID-19, all of us have become more acutely aware of the basic services that sustain us and ensure our comfort and safety.

Modern Landfill has served as critical infrastructure for nearly 50 years, with a mission that takes on new meaning during these uncertain times. Our facility provides safe and environmentally responsible waste disposal services for commercial, residential and industrial customers in central Pennsylvania and neighboring communities, and free recycling services locally.

As essential employees, our team remains in the field — and we sincerely thank all of them for continuing to work tirelessly to serve our customers and local communities.

People are seeing their day-to-day lives change in dramatic ways. We are, too. We're picking up more trash from households where our customers and families are working from home or teaching remotely, and we're seeing more residents take advantage of our free recycling drop-off center off Mount Pisgah Road as they do more while sheltered in place.

We understand the role we play — directly and indirectly — and we're committed to serve any way we can. Beyond the services we provide to our neighbors, Modern Landfill also receives approximately 50 percent of all municipal solid waste generated in York County through our agreement to accept ash residue in partnership with York County Resource Recovery Center.

The health, wellness and safety of our neighbors, customers and employees remain our top priority.

Modern Landfill is an integral part of the local economy and its critical infrastructure, providing jobs for local residents and affordable, responsible waste disposal options and recycling services for our neighbors — even in the most uncertain of times.

Learn more about Modern Landfill at modernlandfillpa.com.